SAFETY SENSE

Getting The Edge On Safety

If you get edgy taking care of your lawn, an edger/trimmer might trim some of the tedium out of your work. Consumer Reports at the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute have some advice for maximum safety and efficiency when using an edger-trimmer.

1. Dress properly. Billowy clothes can get caught in machinery. Snug fitting pants and heavy duty boots are best.

2. Clear your work area of children and pets—who might get in the way of the machine or objects thrown by it.

3. Read the owner's manual. It will bring you up-to-date on exactly how to use your machine safely.

4. Stop the engine completely before leaving the machine or making repairs or refueling.

5. The engine should be left to cool for 10 minutes before refueling. Always wipe up spilled gasoline immediately.

6. Always wear safety glasses or goggles to prevent injury from any objects thrown by the blade.

MEDICAL CHECKLIST

If you're an experienced traveler, you probably pride yourself in being able to handle unexpected travel related emergencies while you're away from home.

Packing comfortable shoes for sightseeing excursions and rain gear for inclement weather are a few of the common emergencies travelers prepare for. As for medical emergencies, travelers also try to remember to take along extra aspirin, vitamins and other daily medications for the duration of their vacations or business trips.

But as a consumer how can you prepare for a serious medical emergency that can happen to you while you're in unfamiliar surroundings? The answer is to carry a summary of your medical history with you (not in your luggage) at all times.

American Express now offers its cardmembers a pocket-size Med Chart that, when filled in, enables a physician to review the medical history of a traveler in distress. A checklist of the life-saving information excerpted from the Med Chart appears below. Use it to prepare your personal, updated, accurate medical fact sheet for traveling. It may be invaluable in facilitating the medical care you need if you become ill while traveling.

Your Med Chart Checklist

• Name and address of your health insurance company and your policy number.
• Name, address and telephone number of a person who should be notified in case of an emergency.
• Name, address and telephone number of your personal physician(s).
• Personal and medical identification cards.
• Current medication and eyeglass prescriptions.
• Previous and current minor and chronic illnesses, such as allergies, high blood pressure and diabetes.
• Results of standard medical tests and your blood type.
• Dates of immunizations, such as flu or typhoid vaccinations.

Consult your physician for advice on pertinent information and help in preparing your medical summary.

"A Dream Come True"

By Dr. William L. Trimyer

The auctioneer makes his way through the crowd to the platform. Beads of perspiration cover his forehead. Dressed in a bright red shirt and jet black slacks, he proudly mounts the stage to begin the auction. Around his waist he wears a wide black leather belt that has the words "PIPE MAN" engraved, obviously done by a skilled artist.

He looks out over the eager crowd. The low roar of conversation and laughter subsides and a hush comes over the large red building. He can hardly believe this is all for real. Twelve years seems like a very long time to wait for a vision to become a reality, but when you're dedicated to your dreams and goals, your labors and sweat seem all worthwhile.

Now the auctioneer flashes a handsome set of clay pipes before the expectant eyes of gathered bargain hunters and antique lovers. He takes a deep breath and asks for the opening bid.

IT IS OPENING NIGHT OF A DREAM COME TRUE.

Who'll start the bidding? What will you give me?
Five? Who'll give me five?
Five! Five-ten, five-ten.
Ten! Ten-fifteen, ten-fifteen. Who'll go fifteen?

The auctioneer's words and numbers come fast like a flurry of punches from the gloves of Muhammed Ali, so you have to listen hard.

The set of clay pipes become a gift as a gesture of opening night! This auctioneer is a man who puts his words into auction. The vision he had twelve years ago for operating his own auction has blossomed in a new enterprise, THE PAMPLIN CLAY PIPE FACTORY AND AUCTION.

The auctioneer is none other than Raymond Dickerson, dreamer, founder, builder and operator of a fascinating new venture that has come to Pamplin City.

Raymond Dickerson, known to many as "THE PIPE MAN," is a man with vision and sharp determination. Twelve years ago a clay pipe was "accidentally" found at the present site of the Pamplin Clay Pipe Factory. No one could have known that twelve years later the ruins of the pipe factory would be what it has become today.

Most people who passed the ruins of the decayed pipe factory and kiln day in and day out saw only an eyesore. But one man looked through those ruins and saw something that no one else saw...He had a vision of reopening the clay pipe factory and turning what used to be a community eyesore into a business of interest for everyone.

July 1 marked the opening of the "PIPE MAN AUCTION." It was exciting to observe what one man with a vision has created for auction lovers everywhere. Raymond and his family have created "a dream come true."

The PAMPLIN CLAY PIPE FACTORY and auction is a new addition to the Pamplin community. It brings with it added growth and attraction to a small town with a unique image.

The "PIPE MAN" is a ambitious sort of fellow whose labors have created a respectable business for the town of Pamplin. And it is not only a business, it is also entertainment for auction lovers.

A fascinating story about the Pamplin clay pipe has been published by "THE PIPE MAN" in a book called "The Story of the Pamplin Clay Pipe." The book tells the unfolding drama of the clay pipe from the late 1800's to the present day. It is interesting to read how an almost forgotten art has been resurrected and preserved in writing. The book is a must for all history buffs. The story of the Pamplin clay pipe is simply another revealing chapter in the historical significance of Appomattox County. The Pamplin Clay Pipe Factory is surely a candidate as a historical landmark for the state of Virginia.

The "PIPE MAN AUCTION" is also a family affair. On opening night the "Pipe Man" was flanked by his son, Keith and his wife, Nancy. Keith recorded the bids and Nancy transacted the business. Other family members and friends pitched in to help make the opening of the "PIPE MAN AUCTION" a big success!

Opening night was a moving experience. It was exciting to watch Raymond in aciton. He knows his business as an auctioneer. Visitors and buyers will find the Pamplin Clay Pipe Factory a fascinating place to visit and browse through. As you walk over the "burial grounds" of the Pipe Factory ruins, you'll sense that you are taking a step back into time and experiencing the heritage that Raymond Dickerson has vowed to keep alive.

The "PIPE MAN AUCTION" will be held the first Saturday of each month. The museum and antique shop is open on Saturday 9-5 and Sunday 1-4, other times by appointment.

Raymond Dickerson is making his mark through the revival of the Pamplin Clay Pipe Factory. With one little pipe a dream has become a reality. We thank you, Raymond, for your vision and labors to bring back to life and memory the clay pipe, as well as a place that will continue to bring amusement and quality business into Appomattox County.
